Together into the Future:
A Beneficial and Natural Partnership
Commitment Statement

We recommit ourselves to “rebuilding the Church” by living the passion of the Gospel in the discerning spirit of our Franciscan charism and tradition.

We are willing to take the necessary risks to be a healing, compassionate presence in our violent world especially with women, children, and those who have no voice.

We desire to reflect this commitment in our dialogue with the entire Church, in our own governing structures, and in our relationship with one another as sister.

Mission Statement

We, the Sisters of St. Francis of Philadelphia, choose to live the Gospel in the prophetic spirit of Francis of Assisi and our Foundress Mother Francis Bachmann. With Jesus Christ as Brother, we live as sister with one another, with the entire human family, and with all creation. Calling ourselves and one another to continuous conversion of heart, we commit ourselves to a life of contemplation, poverty, and humility.

As vowed women of the Church, we respond with diverse gifts in a spirit of collaboration and of mutual service to the needs of others, especially the economically poor, the marginal, and the oppressed. Seeking to participate in the Spirit’s action in the world, we direct our personal and corporate resources to the promotion of justice, peace, and reconciliation.

Filled with trust in the goodness of God, we move forward.

POIN T O F VieW

ALL things work for GOOD for those who love GOD!
Romans 8:28

O ur lives are journeys of interconnectedness. As cocreators, we can accomplish more than we ever could alone. Each of us has a mission—God’s purpose for us. That mission is revealed through daily faithfulness to prayer and the Gospel and through the stirrings within our heart. The feature articles in this edition of Good News give witness to the goodness of God working in the minds and hearts of ordinary people who believe in and cherish God’s love enough to share it with others.

“Together into the Future: A Beneficial and Natural Partnership” expresses the story and significance of Our Lady of Angels’ transition to Neumann University. This partnership is rooted in centuries of dedication to the Franciscan charism, enfleshed through Mother Francis Bachmann, the Sisters of St. Francis of Philadelphia, and the extraordinary generosity of people who continue to share our mission. An endeavor such as this partnership requires astute insight to discern our responsibility, to understand what God asks of us at this time. Responding to the challenge of continuous conversion, we have opened and must continue to open our minds and hearts—to relinquish all that impedes love of God, self, and others. Such letting go gives us the freedom to embrace the unknown, confident that God will provide for all of our needs so that we, in turn, can give to others.

Manifestation in behalf of others is possible for those who are attuned to God’s call to be instruments of compassion. We read such a story in “St. Francis House: Easing the Hardships of Those in Need.” Fifty-eight years ago, Doris and Stan Michalek sensed an urgency to do what they could to alleviate suffering in their community. What began then with an inspiration to help continues to help many now. Their daughter, Sister Patricia Michalek, OSF, and her staff embody the legacy of selflessness begun by her parents. “A simple clothing bank” has grown beyond what Doris and Stan ever imagined—reflecting that as we collaborate with God as cocreators, we give testimony to the wonderful things that can be accomplished.

As these stories show, “ALL things work for GOOD for those who love GOD!” (Romans 8:28).

May God bless you always and in all ways!

The purpose of Good News is to further the Gospel mission of the Sisters of St. Francis of Philadelphia by sharing the good news of the congregation with our friends, family, companions, and sisters. Through this publication, we hope to share the charism of our congregation and invite others to become involved in our mission.

Good News is published twice per year (spring/summer and fall/winter) by the Sisters of St. Francis of Philadelphia. We welcome your feedback and comments; correspondence should be addressed to Good News at the address above.

On the cover: Aerial photo of the Our Lady of Angels Convent and Neumann University property as it currently stands. The plans have the property changing greatly over the next 15 years; however, the essence of the sisters and their history will always remain.
Stepping into the multipurpose room in the Bruder Center on the Neumann University campus, visitors are greeted by a massive mural displaying the school’s “RISES” values: reverence, integrity, service, excellence, and stewardship.

The school has incorporated these values throughout its history, since first being founded by the Sisters of St. Francis of Philadelphia in 1965. Originally named Our Lady of Angels College, which the sisters began in a wing of Our Lady of Angels Convent, Neumann University has the sisters’ legacy at the heart of the institution.

It should come as no surprise, then, that when the sisters realized it was time to initiate a transition to new ownership for the motherhouse and land currently owned by their community, Neumann would become a prime candidate for the transaction. Perhaps the congregation’s most important criterion was that any new owners be respectful of their history and “LETTING GO OF THE FAMILIAR IS ALWAYS DIFFICULT. I WOULD SAY THAT, THOUGH DIFFICULT, THE SISTERS KNOW IT’S THE RIGHT DECISION.”

A Big Decision

The notion of finding new ownership for certain properties first arose at the 2014 Congregational Chapter. A sustainability committee was developed to assess the continuation of keeping Our Lady of Angels Convent and other lands and to address the question of whether or not it was time to transfer the property given the future needs of the sisters.

When the Congregational Assembly took place in 2017, the idea of the transfer was presented. The sisters had seen other congregations make this choice in recent years, so they were prepared to take it into consideration. After about a year of reflection, discussion, and prayer, they affirmed the decision to transition the land to new ownership, and the search for just the right partner began.

Neumann’s interest in being that partner intensified in May 2021. Because the university already shared the sisters’ values, the partnership developed as a natural and mutually beneficial one. Teams from both sides met regularly to work out the details in respect to the needs of both Neumann and the sisters and to obtain the proper approvals from Aston Township and Church officials.

Letting Go of the Familiar

The transfer of the property to Neumann includes 63 acres of land as well as two residential homes, a two-story residence and office building, multiple outdoor sacred spaces, and, most significantly, Our Lady of Angels Convent—the motherhouse and an iconic Delaware County building.

“The motherhouse is such an enormous building. It’s very meaningful to us. Most of us made our vows there. It’s home in many ways, but we knew we really wouldn’t need it in the future,” said Sister Kathryn Dougherty, OSF. When discussions of the transfer got underway, Sister Kathy was the congregational minister. “We want to be about our mission, about serving those who are marginalized, and willing to preserve what the sisters value. In this way, Neumann was an excellent fit.

it didn’t make sense to put time, energy, and funding into maintaining a building we didn’t need. It’s more about ‘what’s God calling us to do at this point in our life?’"

The current leadership team, who began their ministry in 2021, includes new congregational minister Sister Theresa Firenze, assistant congregational minister Sister Celeste Crine, and three council members: Sisters Marian Leaf, Florence Hee, and Karen Pourby. Speaking on behalf of the team, Sister Theresa shared this statement: “Letting go of the familiar is always difficult. I would say that, though difficult, the sisters know it’s the right decision…. We know God is with us, guiding us, and carrying us through, and although we never know what the future will hold, we remain committed to our mission and courageous in our trust in God and in God’s faithfulness.”

“The transition [of buildings and land] to Neumann University frees us to focus on our mission and provides financial security for extending our legacy in the decades ahead,” Sister Theresa added. “We see this as expanding the mission of the congregation through Neumann University’s educating students in the Franciscan tradition and values. It’s very close to our hearts. It’s a wonderful partnership, and I don’t think we could have asked for better.”

Indeed, while elements of this decision may have felt bittersweet, a sentiment repeated over and over among the sisters was gratitude that Neumann would be the one to take on the property. The sisters have sponsored Neumann for over 55 years. Were the property going... to an unfamiliar entity or local developer, it would have felt much more difficult.

An additional comfort is the fact that Neumann is dedicated to maintaining the sacredness of the grounds. Multiple outdoor sacred spaces will continue to be preserved under the university’s care, including the grotto, labyrinth, Stations of the Cross, and Our Lady of Angels Cemetery.

A Shared Vision for the Future

The sisters recognize that this transition provides new opportunities for them to fulfill their mission. Many students who attend Neumann are the first in their families to attend college. Education is a vital component in improving the quality of their lives. By allowing this transaction, the sisters are in essence allowing countless future Neumann “Knights” to have greater opportunities.

The congregation is discovering how to serve in a new way. Just as the property is transitioning, their ministry is transitioning away from hands-on activity such as university teaching and retreat leadership and into one of presence, prayer, and mentorship.

Likewise, Neumann University is transitioning as it continues to develop an ever-greater presence. Even during this time of uncertainty, when other institutions are cautious about expansion, Neumann maintains a vision for the future and a focus on serving its students.

Reflecting on the time when the sisters first built the Bachmann building, now at the heart of the campus, Dr. Chris Domes, president of Neumann University, noted, “That was a leap of faith of the sisters. They didn’t know what the future would hold, yet they built this incredible building for a future they couldn’t really see at that point. …The sisters were risk-takers, in the best sense of what that means, being people of faith and being inspired by a mission and a set of values. I think we all at Neumann take our inspiration from the Sisters of St. Francis of Philadelphia.”

The sisters have now taken another leap of faith. So has Neumann, towards fulfilling its vision for its students. The board of the university always knew that to develop this vision, more land would eventually be needed, and by 2018, they began to ask more seriously whether or not acquiring some of the sisters’ land was something the school could manage.

“We began a process of planning and looking ahead at the university’s future,” said Dr. Domes. “We feel very strongly that we have the capacity to do this and that it meets our students’ needs. We feel it’s very important that we continue to live out our mission and our values; this aligns really well with our future direction.”

This property, adjacent to the university, will essentially double the size of the campus, allowing Neumann to develop a number of projects. For example, the school will be able to expand its athletic fields and facilities. Proposed plans include developing a synthetic grass field and track, as well as building an ice rink for Neumann’s popular ice hockey team.

Neumann University has wonderful plans for the future of their campus and what they can offer their students. The Sisters of St. Francis continue to be an integral part of this plan. They offer a presence on campus helping to continue to share and strengthen Neumann’s Franciscan values and mission. Many have gone before them, but the current sisters on staff at Neumann include:

Sister Linda DeCero
Director of Pastoral Services/ Spirituality

Sister Mary Kathryn Dougherty
Vice President for Mission & Ministry

Sister Patricia Hutchison
Director of Neumann Institute and Undergraduate Core Curriculum, Adjunct Professor

Sister Mary Ann McCarthy
Administrative Assistant

Sister Marguerite O’Beirne
Volunteer

Sister Linda Sariego
Assistant Professor

Sister Corinne Wright

Another outdoor space that will be left untouched is Our Lady of Angels Cemetery. Dating back to the 1800s, a majority of the sisters are laid to rest in this space. It will remain a place for quiet contemplation to honor the memory of the Sisters of St. Francis of Philadelphia who have passed.
Another forward-thinking project is to create a Center for Entrepreneurship, supporting a key area of interest for many Neumann students. The center would be affiliated with the School of Business, offer resources for building both nonprofit and for-profit businesses, and be open to any major, student, alum, or even local community member. Providing resources and space for budding entrepreneurs to think creatively and develop their own opportunities is central to the university's mission and aligns with the Franciscan spirit of creating positive change.

Perhaps the most important project, though, is that of creating a student union to strengthen the experience of both resident and commuter students. Until 25 years ago, Neumann was primarily a commuter school, but then, over the course of several years, it became a more residential campus. However, one element of a residential campus is still missing: a central hub where all students can feel engaged and welcomed.

"Such a hub would focus on four areas," said Dr. Domes, "leadership development, faith development, community, and fun. It would be a fun place to go. Those are the elements that we see as really important for our student union. It will really solidify our sense of a residential campus."

These are all ambitious plans, but ones that the university envisions making a reality over the course of the next 15 years. The benefits of being able to offer all these amenities are undeniable.

"Our mission is more relevant today than ever, and speaks to the needs of a student population that is deeply hungry for this kind of educational experience," said Dr. Domes. "That mission continues to be lived out on campus thanks to the sisters."

At the Heart of the Sisters

Another benefit of this partnership is the fact that the sisters won’t have to move out of the motherhouse immediately, which likely wouldn’t have been the case if the property had gone to a third party. While there is a goal of creating a student would hold. In both cases, God always provided exactly what was needed.

“Finally, and perhaps most poignantly, there’s, ‘Even if everything is lost and destroyed, let us be one heart united in love.’ A core Franciscan value is that of detachment. Material items and lodgings aren’t what’s important; what’s important is how this community remains united. No matter where the sisters reside in the future, their ‘one heart’ will stay strong—and continue to serve.”

During her 11 years as a resident of Our Lady of Angels Convent, Sister Maria de Guadalupe Diaz has made nearly 1,500 rosaries. The rosaries have gone as far as Kenya, Ireland, and Jamaica. Closer to home they have traveled to New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and Florida. They have served as gifts to Neumann University and OLA employees. The rosaries are varied in color, shape of bead, and type of crucifix. Many of the beads are Job’s tears that come from the backyard of Sister Maria’s sister, Agnes, in Puerto Rico. Sister Maria de Guadalupe not only makes rosaries but also says the rosary several times each day. Her ministry, therefore, has a two-fold effect: the joy that the recipients of the rosaries experience and the prayer of the rosary, which many believe is the most powerful of all prayers.

WORLDWIDE

Led by the Social Concerns Committee, the Sisters of St. Francis of Philadelphia have donated about $12,000 to help some of those affected by recent national and world events causing great suffering. On August 14, 2021, Haiti was struck by a 7.2 magnitude earthquake. In solidarity with the Haitian people, the Sisters of St. Francis of Philadelphia raised contributions during liturgy and through funds sent to the Sisters of St. Francis Foundation. During the Christmas season, to help refugees from Afghanistan in resettling locally, the Sisters of St. Francis gave from their collections and gave additional help by choosing soup meals during Advent. Then throughout January 2022, the sisters collected contributions for the Kentucky residents whose lives were deeply affected by the devastating tornadoes striking western Kentucky and neighboring states on the night of December 10-11, 2021. In March 2022, the focus shifted to include help for Ukraine.

Who are the ‘Sisters of St. Francis of Philadelphia’?
Through this section we hope to share a glimpse of our congregation and the individuals who make real its mission.
MARYLAND

The parishioners in the Rosedale, Maryland, parish of St. Clement Mary Hofbauer and their pastor, Friar Timothy Dore, have welcomed a lovely garden in honor of the Sisters of St. Francis of Philadelphia. The restful garden, dedicated and blessed on October 3, 2021, is located between the former convent for the Sisters of St. Francis and the church and offers benches, picnic tables, and a fish pond, all under the watchful eye of St. Francis of Assisi, whose statue stands on a nearby stone wall. Flowers and shrubs line the garden sidewalks. A newly installed fence bears a plaque dedicating the garden to the memory of the many sisters who ministered in the school and parish from 1932 through 2003.

NATIONWIDE

The Sisters of St. Francis of Philadelphia are helping to bring positive change to worker conditions in the meatpacking industry. The Sisters of St. Francis and other investor-coalition partners, especially Investor Advocates for Social Justice, have prompted action to advance equity within Tyson Foods, Inc., the largest U.S. meatpacking company by sales. The company is among the meatpackers coming under scrutiny during the pandemic for inhumane treatment of the industry’s largely minority workforce.

In August 2021, 17 investor members of the Interfaith Center on Corporate Responsibility, including the Sisters of St. Francis of Philadelphia, cofiled a proposal for a racial audit within Tyson Foods. For several years, Tyson has been a company of concern in the areas of racial equality and worker rights. In addition to filing the proposal, the investor coalitions have held numerous conversations with Tyson representatives.

The filing and discussions have led to a meaningful outcome. Tyson Foods has agreed to commission a detailed study to determine whether its practices contribute to racial inequities. As a result of the agreement, the participating shareholders, including the Sisters of St. Francis, have withdrawn their proposal.

PENNSYLVANIA

On October 2, 2021, Red Hill Farm held its annual Farm to Table Dinner. This year’s dinner helped to raise the money needed for a new high tunnel for the farm. In addition to the money raised through ticket sales, the farm received several generous donations. While high tunnels are used throughout the growing season, they are also especially valuable in helping the farm to extend its growing season. Farm employees and volunteers can start plants earlier in the spring when it is too cool outdoors and can keep plants going longer in the fall as well. Red Hill Farm built the new high tunnel in early spring 2022. Learn more about Red Hill Farm on our website: www.osfphila.org/red-hill-farm/.

The additional high tunnel will allow us to grow healthy seedling plants in a climate-controlled environment.
St. Francis House:
Easing the Hardships of Those in Need

Caleb finds just the right toy while his mother, Sonya, searches for clothing for her family. Not only does the St. Francis House make available gently used clothing and household items for people like Caleb and his mother, but over the years their programs have also grown to include help with paying utilities or rent. There is even a Christmas Adoption program so that members of the community can adopt families in need and provide them with gifts at Christmas.
Ever since its inception, St. Francis House in Puyallup, Washington, has expressed and experienced God’s love—giving and receiving what is needed, sometimes in ways that seem miraculous. Sister Patricia Michalek, OSF, whose parents founded St. Francis House nearly five decades ago, shared that “The biggest example of this came shortly after I first came on as executive director. An insurance bill had come in, and at the time we didn’t have the money to cover it. I thought, ‘We just need $1,010.’ The next day, we received a check in the mail for exactly $1,010.”

Through such amazing examples of God’s caring and through countless everyday acts, St. Francis House reflects the Franciscan charism, reaching out with kindness to serve all those in need. The original inspiration for the center grew out of the work of the Anchorage-based Fraternity of Secular Franciscans following the massive 1964 Alaskan earthquake. The magnitude 9.2 earthquake destroyed multiple communities. In an embodiment of the Franciscan spirit of collaboration, the fraternity put an outreach program into effect, connecting those who had made it through the earthquake relatively unscathed with those who had lost everything.

At the time, the Fraternity of Secular Franciscans in Tacoma, Washington, was looking for ways to expand their ministry. Moved by what was happening in Alaska, fraternity members Doris and Stan Michalek wondered if they could do something similar in their own town—about 20 minutes south of downtown Tacoma—to connect those living in abundance with those who were struggling. Thus Puyallup’s St. Francis House was born.

Another remarkable story concerned a local man who entered the St. Francis House clothing bank to do a bit of shopping. The man had received great news: he’d just landed a job in construction. The catch? He had to have a pair of steel-toed boots in order to do the work. Unfortunately, the clothing bank didn’t have a pair in his size, so he wandered among the racks to give himself time to think. As he was browsing, a person entered and, although it was not within the normal donation hours, donated a pair of steel-toed boots in just the right size.

After many years of service, Sister Pat’s mother, Doris, was no longer able to continue handling all the work that was required. “I asked congregational leadership if I could apply to be the director. St. Francis House did not have a director; my mom was the closest thing,” said Sister Pat. The community agreed, recognizing that the St. Francis House mission was closely aligned with their own, reflecting the Franciscan vision. So in 2001, Sister Pat became St. Francis House’s first paid employee; she has led the ministry ever since.

Over the years, several sisters of St. Francis in addition to Sister Pat have ministered at St. Francis House. While a number of these sisters have since retired or passed away, Sister Jude Connelly, OSF, and other Tacoma-area sisters volunteer on occasion. “We are blessed to have a tight-knit community of support,” said Sister Pat.

Humble Beginnings

When St. Francis House was first established, a local couple, the Lewendowskis, donated the free use of a vacant store in Tacoma to house the initial clothing bank. The fruits of their generosity have multiplied. Today, the organization owns an acre of land in addition to several buildings in Puyallup. The clothing bank is set up to resemble a retail store, with clothes the ministry’s growth and help for a great many people. Both then and now, she explained, “St. Francis House provides a channel through which those who have more than they need are able to share with those who have less.”
hanging neatly on racks to give clients a true “shopping” experience. This design allows them to maintain a sense of dignity—central to the organization’s mission. While the clothes are free, customers still “check out” at the end.

From the clothing bank, other services have grown. For example, the back corner of the original clothing bank used to host a small area where food and coffee were available. Sharing a cup of coffee in this relaxed setting provided an ideal opportunity to talk with clients and assess their needs. As St. Francis House grew and moved to different locations, however, this café was no longer practical and other means of discovering the needs of clients were developed.

St. Francis House now has an intake process for those in need who visit the clothing bank. This process involves a series of basic questions that lead naturally to additional sharing about the causes and details of visitors’ current difficulties. Their challenges often come from unemployment or underemployment. Individuals may be working two jobs but still find they can’t make ends meet. In other instances, a change in circumstances, such as an elderly parent coming to live with a family, might be what has overextended that family’s resources.

Meeting the Greatest Need

As St. Francis House has grown, its services have consistently evolved to meet the greatest need and avoid duplicating services available elsewhere. For instance, when there was a large local migrant community, teaching English as a second language was a priority. Similarly, when it was discovered that many clients were using food money for rent, an evening meal program was developed. When it was realized that some families were facing eviction from their homes, an emergency rent and utilities assistance program was created.

“In implementing the emergency assistance program, we now have a carefully designed process to evaluate and offer help to families where we think it will really make a difference,” Sister Pat said. “If there’s no job in the near future, there’s no point helping with rent for just one month because the next month they’ll need it again. However, it may help them over the hump and they can go on their own after that.” In some cases, something as simple as a car repair might have drained a family’s finances that month and assistance with one month’s rent will keep them afloat. In others, it might be that someone lost a job but has another lined up in the near future and just needs to bridge the gap.

Another highly successful St. Francis House offering is the Christmas Adoption program, which allows families to adopt other families to provide gifts at Christmas. “Connecting people who have with those who don’t is a basic principle of ours,” said Sister Pat. The adopting families often have adult children. In lieu of gift giving among themselves, they may decide to put money toward helping those less fortunate. St. Francis House identifies families with a pressing need and asks them to make a list of necessities, toys their children want, everyone’s favorite colors, and so on, so that the adopting families know what to give. “The adopting families usually have a glorious time shopping,” laughed Sister Pat. “I honestly don’t know who has more fun: the family who gives or the family who receives.”

While the paired Christmas Adoption families never meet, the adopting family does learn the story of the family they’re helping. One participating family was particularly moved by what they learned, so much so that they have continued to help their adopted family in subsequent years.
years. That family’s story is a difficult one: the single mother’s sister had come to visit with her four children and then left alone in the middle of the night, never returning. The remaining mother first came to St. Francis House because she couldn’t manage the situation: caring for her own children plus four nieces and nephews. This past year, St. Francis House saw 53 families adopted at Christmastime.

God Provides

Despite the fact that Covid-19 meant canceling fundraisers normally vital for funding the ministry, St. Francis House has had tremendous community support from individuals and groups of many faiths and backgrounds. This support has brought the money needed to continue the mission. Now as Sister Pat nears retirement, she trusts God will also provide the right person to take her place as executive director and continue her work in the tradition of St. Francis. “I hope the best of our Franciscan charism will always continue here,” Sister Pat said. “I assure the board as we look to the next chapter, as long as we have been true to our mission of reaching out to God’s poor, God has always taken care of us.”

Those who are served and those who serve at St. Francis House are clearly experiencing and reflecting God’s love. Ever true to the Franciscan charism of cooperation and kindness in service to others, the St. Francis House employees and volunteers live by Jesus’ commandment at the heart of the Gospel: “You shall love your neighbor as yourself.”

St. Francis House runs strictly off donated goods. Donors are generous and back stock often exceeds the clothing bank’s ability to absorb the donations. For this reason, there is a highly organized storage system in place on site. Off-season and surplus items are stored in giant plywood bins that can only be accessed via forklift. Here, staff member Trisha Frey expertly maneuvers a storage bin into place.

HOW YOU CAN HELP…

- Consider making a financial contribution. Organizations like St. Francis House survive based on the generosity of their communities. If it’s within your means, offer a monetary gift.

- Donate goods. Whether or not you live near St. Francis House, there are sure to be organizations in your area looking for donated goods so they can provide services similar to the clothing bank’s. Round up items you no longer need to give to those who can use them.

- Volunteer time. If you have the time and feel called to do so, consider volunteering or engaging in other opportunities (such as the Christmas Adoption program) where you can directly impact those in need.

- Get inspired. Just as Doris and Stan Michalek were first inspired to found St. Francis House when they heard about the work happening in Alaska, seek inspiration in your own life for how you might be of service—then act on that inspiration!
Among the more than half a million Americans experiencing homelessness on a typical night, families and their needs are too often overlooked. Yet about 30 percent of those without a home are adults and children living as families.1 Determined to help families without adequate shelter, in 1987, Sister Marie Patrice Feeney, OSF, and Sister Margaret Jones, OSF, founded St. Mary’s Franciscan Shelter for Homeless Families. The former Phoenixville, Pennsylvania, convent of the Immaculate Heart of Mary Sisters, in St. Mary of the Assumption Parish, was renovated to provide a home for five families at a time for up to eight weeks each.

St. Mary’s Franciscan Shelter is a nonprofit organization governed by a volunteer advisory board and guided by the spirit of the Gospel and Sts. Francis and Clare of Assisi. The shelter’s mission is to provide a safe, peaceful, temporary refuge for homeless families; to create a community environment; and to foster dignity, self-esteem, and independence. Although in 2015 the shelter was divested from the Sisters of St. Francis, they remain actively involved as shelter supporters, advisors, and members of the board of directors. Currently, Sister Eleanor Moore, OSF, is a member of the board. The shelter also collaborates with local agencies and more than two-dozen area churches that are generously and actively involved, especially in providing meals for St. Mary’s Franciscan Shelter residents.

On September 23, 2021, St. Mary’s Franciscan Shelter held a ribbon-cutting ceremony for a new transitional housing unit on the grounds of the existing shelter. St. Mary’s Franciscan Shelter founder Sister Marie Patrice Feeney, OSF, and Sister Mary Teresa Coll, OSF, who served the shelter for more than 20 years, were present for the ribbon-cutting. The new facility, which was converted from a former schoolhouse in a six-year renovation project, provides four transitional housing apartments that offer families the needed security, resources, and time to find long-term or permanent housing.

The new transitional-housing apartments each include two bedrooms—with beds donated by the Sisters of St. Francis—a living and dining room, a bathroom, and a galley kitchen with new appliances. Families are able to remain in these St. Mary’s Franciscan Shelter apartments for 18 to 24 months, during which time the families receive personal case management and onsite coaching to support them in reaching their housing, employment, and other significant goals. Apartment residents are offered onsite training in parenting and in household and time management. The adults are also asked to pursue education in a field with the income potential required for them and their families to reach independence. Sister Bernadette Dougherty, SSJ, the executive director of St. Mary’s Franciscan Shelter, explains that the shelter gives the resident families “all the support they need to get back on their feet. We help them break the cycle of poverty.”

A few facts help to illustrate the notable difference that St. Mary’s Franciscan Shelter is making in the lives of the families they serve. While only 18 percent of the shelter’s residents are employed when they arrive, more than 60 percent have jobs at departure. And while the national placement average for formerly homeless individuals and families is 12 percent, close to 40 percent of St. Mary’s residents find permanent homes. Since 1987, more than 640 families have been guests at St. Mary’s Franciscan Shelter for Homeless Families, which has provided these guests with more than 120,000 nights of shelter and 345,000 meals.

Neumann University’s Knights’ Pantry: Seeking to End Student Food Insecurity

Neumann University has opened the Knights’ Pantry, a food bank whose mission is to provide resources to alleviate food insecurity, improve health and well-being, ensure a reduction in food waste, and promote sustainability on campus. All Neumann University undergraduate and graduate students are eligible to use the pantry, which offers nonperishable food and personal hygiene items. Rina Keller, a Neumann University professor of social work, and Mary Beth Davis, a counselor at Neumann’s Counseling Center for Wellness, saw the need for a food bank on their campus. They created and implemented a plan that led to the opening of the Knights’ Pantry, which will increasingly become a student-run project. While ongoing donations remain crucial to the success of the Knights’ Pantry, the pantry has received generous support from individuals and community partners, including Red Hill Farm.

In the Franciscan Tradition: Bringing Light to Need

An article by Mike Lang in the Diocese of Wilmington Dialog highlights the history and the new location and name for Wilmington’s Amanecer Counseling and Resource Center. As the January 27, 2022, article explains, the center under its original name—the Family Counseling Center of St. Paul’s—was founded in 2003 by Sister Theresa Elitz. To honor Sister Theresa’s vision and extended contributions, dedication of the center’s new location and celebration of its new name took place this fall on her birthday. For much of the center’s history, Sister Theresa and her staff met with about 300 clients from across the region in the rectory for Wilmington’s St. Paul Catholic Church, a small and busy space. After briefly relocating to a building on South Harrison Street, the center has a welcoming new home at Third and Van Buren Streets—across from St. Paul’s—in a house purchased from the Franciscan friars’ Holy Name Province.

The center’s new name, Amanecer—Spanish for dawn, sunrise, or awakening—represents both the center’s hope for its clients and its desire to illuminate the unmet or insufficiently met need for mental health resources for the area’s Hispanic population.
Sister Kathleen Francis McCarron has joined Assisi House as the retirement convent’s administrator. Sister Kate brings impressive background to her new position. She holds degrees in sociology, psychology, and social work and also is a Licensed Social Worker. Sister Kate has ministered as a social worker, as a counselor, and as a director of pastoral care in several different institutions and ministries. An experienced leader, she served as a member of the congregational council from 2002 to 2008. Our elder sisters are indeed in good hands. Welcome, Sister Kate!

Leading The Catholic High School of Baltimore into the Future
For Barbara D. Nazelrod, the 2021-22 academic year has marked her 21st as president of The Catholic High School of Baltimore, the longest tenure for any head of school in the archdiocese. She is also a Catholic High graduate, class of ’68. During her two decades as president, Dr. Nazelrod has helped to build a welcoming and academically excellent high school in the Franciscan tradition. As she explained in a recent interview, “We get our identity and our mission and values from the Sisters of St. Francis of Philadelphia.”

Dr. Barbara Nazelrod, president of Catholic High, talks with students between classes. More than 12,000 young women have graduated from the school since it opened in 1939.
David and Carol Strohminger are lifelong Franciscans and devoted champions of the Sisters of St. Francis and their charism. Dave, whose sister is Sister Ann David Strohminger, is a member of the Sisters of St. Francis Foundation Board and is on the board’s outreach committee.

Dave and his sister Nancy—now Sister Ann David—were taught by Franciscans at Baltimore’s Shrine of the Little Flower. Dave credits his Franciscan teachers with giving him an excellent education. At St. Anthony of Padua in the Archdiocese of Baltimore, Carol’s teachers were also Franciscans. After graduating from the Catholic High School of Baltimore and St. Agnes College, Carol returned to St. Anthony of Padua as a primary-school teacher—becoming the colleague of some of the same Franciscan sisters who had taught her.

From 1968 until his retirement in 2010, Dave was a partner in the automotive dealership Schaefer & Strohminger. Dave learned the business early, working summers beginning in 1960 to help his father, George, and his Uncle Henry. Dave relates, “The George, Henry, and Lou [Schaefer] team always supported the Franciscans; I continued that support when my time came. Whenever a Franciscan needed to borrow a car, we always said yes, and this was a source of great pleasure for all of us.”

Dave’s and Carol’s close ties with the Sisters of St. Francis have extended even beyond their education and careers. Both welcome taking part in special events sponsored by the Sisters of St. Francis. And in their vacation home on the Magothy River, south of Baltimore, Carol and Dave have celebrated special occasions and had the pleasure of many other visits with Franciscan sisters.

Reflecting on his ongoing enthusiastic support of the Sisters of St. Francis, Dave says, “Carol and I have always liked the objectives of the foundation board, so it has seemed easy to ‘tag along.’ Carol and I believe that the Franciscans really work on their mission to help people and support those in need, so we see our funds being used to further our own goals, as well; the nuns just do it better!”
On December 8, 2021, the Sisters of St. Francis of Philadelphia formally committed to the Laudato Si’ Action Platform in support of Pope Francis’ encyclical Laudato Si’: On Care for Our Common Home. Laudato Si’ presents a vision of integral ecology and calls on every human being to love, respect, and nurture the Earth as Sister and Mother, as our shared inheritance and home.

In May 2021, Pope Francis announced the Laudato Si’ Action Platform as an urgent initiative challenging the entire Catholic Church and world community to prepare a better tomorrow for future generations. The platform is a seven-year journey bringing together seven sectors—families, dioceses and parishes, educational institutions, health-care institutions, organizations and groups, the economic sector, and religious congregations. These sectors—all of us—are called to respond to the seven Laudato Si’ Action Platform goals: response to the cry of the Earth, response to the cry of the poor, ecological economics, adoption of sustainable lifestyles, ecological education, ecological spirituality, and community resilience and empowerment.

The Sisters of St. Francis of Philadelphia stand strongly in support of Pope Francis’ Laudato Si’ vision. In their 2017 Corporate Stand on Care for Creation, the sisters committed to ecological education for themselves and others leading to concrete individual and communal actions. Under the ongoing leadership of their Care for Creation Committee, the congregation has continued to respond to Laudato Si’ through education and action. Congregational leadership enthusiastically agreed with the committee’s recommendation that the Sisters of St. Francis of Philadelphia formally join the Laudato Si’ Action Platform: “As Franciscans, how can we not?”

The Care for Creation Committee is now coordinating development of the congregation’s Laudato Si’ Action Plan. This plan will include engaging individuals at both the congregational and the local level to do their part in caring for the Earth and its people by embracing an eco-sustainable lifestyle and society. The Sisters of St. Francis of Philadelphia and their Companions in Mission, sponsored and cosponsored ministries, and coworkers and extended community will all play a part in moving toward deeper ecological transformation in care for our common home.

The Laudato Si’ Action Platform goals set by Pope Francis ask us to redefine and rebuild our relationship with each other and our common home. They call for a spiritual and cultural revolution to realize integral ecology in a profound act of care.

In Rome on October 9 and 10, 2021, Pope Francis formally opened the Synod on Synodality, a two-year process of listening and dialogue. Through this synodal process, Pope Francis is inviting the entire Church to deep reflection: “By walking together, and together reflecting on the journey made, the Church will be able to learn from what it will experience which processes can help it to live communion, to achieve participation, to open itself to mission.” Pope Francis’ words on Synod 2021–2023 and a detailed guide to the synodal process can be found at www.synod.va.

For this process, Pope Francis invites the Church’s laity, religious, and clergy all to listen, pray, and converse together about the Church through synodality—meaning collaborative discernment—in preparation for the bishops’ synod in 2023. A U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops (www.usccb.org) document explains that “the decision to ‘journey together’ is a prophetic sign for the human family, which needs a shared project capable of pursuing the good of all.” Each diocese will complete their input by August 2022. The Sisters of St. Francis are participating in this important process of coming together as a church and people. Stay tuned to learn more in upcoming publications.
John and Fay McManus contribute to the Sisters of St. Francis both through John S. McManus Inc. and as individuals.

JOHN & FAY MCMANUS

John and Fay McManus are loyal friends of the Sisters of St. Francis of Philadelphia. Fay’s Franciscan ties began with evening courses at Our Lady of Angels College (now Neumann University). Then through a program allowing advanced undergraduates to teach, Fay taught second grade at St. Francis de Sales School in Lenni, where sisters of St. Francis became her colleagues and friends.

After graduating, Fay stayed home with their sons, Sean and Michael. When she was ready to return to work, she entered Neumann’s nursing program, and the boys attended the college’s Child Development Center. Fay went on to serve for many years as a nurse for area schools. She notes, “My nursing professors included Dr. Rosalie Mirenda,” who would become Neumann’s president. “I loved being at Neumann because the Sisters of St. Francis are open, warm, and welcoming, and I found them very supportive of all the students. I loved Rosalie, and now President Chris Domes is also doing a wonderful job. He is very considerate of the sisters—supporting them and keeping their mission in the forefront while growing the university.”

President Rosalie Mirenda encouraged Fay and John to become involved in Neumann’s alumni activities. They are also strong friends of the university through their business. John—who holds a degree in marketing and management from Saint Joseph’s University—is the president and CEO of John S. McManus Inc., a family-run company whose roots extend back to the 19th century. Construction projects the company has overseen include Riddle Memorial Hospital’s Rothman Institute. For Neumann University, the company built a two-story addition to the Rocco A. Abessinio Building, adding 17,000 square feet to accommodate growth in the university’s physical therapy doctoral program and undergraduate nursing and health-sciences programs.

Sister Mary Vandergeest first encouraged John and Fay McManus to become further involved with the Sisters of St. Francis. John has now served on the foundation board for many years. Both John and Fay agree, “We love the sisters and believe it is important that we support them—and we wouldn’t miss their annual Franciscan Night! They do so much good for the community, caring not only for the poor but for everyone. We ourselves serve and are served by supporting them.”

“FAY AND JOHN HAVE BEEN SUPPORTIVE OF THE SISTERS’ ENDEAVORS AND ARE WILLING TO DO WHATEVER THEY CAN TO LEND A HELPING HAND. WE ARE GRATEFUL FOR THEIR LEVEL OF COMMITMENT.”
— SISTER MARY VANDERGEEST

“John and Fay “will do anything for the Sisters of St. Francis!” and “wouldn’t miss Franciscan Night!” Here John joins Sisters Lynn Patrice Lavin and Margaret Egan.

Assisi House Happenings

The sisters at Assisi House continue their missions in corporal works of mercy by helping with projects for Anna’s Place in Chester, Pennsylvania. In one project, using fabric donated by the United Way of Bucks County, the sisters made 60 hand-sewn and hand-stuffed Christmas pillows for Anna’s Place. During the fall, Assisi House held their second Sisters Cooking demonstration. Congregational minister Sister Theresa Firenze, Assisi House resident Sister Jean Margaret McDevitt, and former dining services staff member Khalil Clarke each demonstrated and prepared a favorite recipe. Assisi House resident Sister Mary Teresa Coll cohosted the event. Assisi Have’s 2021-22 first-Friday programs began with Sister Clare D’Auria’s first presentation in her series Dancing with the Spirit: The Seven Joys of Our Lady. In addition, Sister Anne Amati introduced a seven-week series responding to Pope Francis’ Laudato Si’ Action Platform on care for creation.

A Franciscan Mission Recalled in Poetry

In 1879, the Sisters of St. Francis of Philadelphia established the St. James Protectory, an orphanage for boys, at Lovering Avenue and DuPont Street in Wilmington, Delaware. Then in 1888, the orphanage moved to a large farm, called Reybold, near Delaware City. The Sisters of St. Francis continued to serve the mission until its closing in 1941. Delaware poet Anne Yarbrough has published a book of poetry, Refinery (Broadkill River Press, 2021), about the Delaware City Refinery region. Four poems in this prize-winning collection chronicle the history of the St. James Protectory and reflect on what life there must have been like for the sisters and boys. In her book, Anne Yarbrough acknowledges Sister Helen Jacobson, archivist for the Sisters of St. Francis of Philadelphia, for allowing the use of accounts from the sisters’ archives. In May 1964, Reverend Mother Mary Agnes, superior general of the Sisters of St. Francis of Philadelphia, turned the first spade of earth at the groundbreaking of Our Lady of Angels College. The college on the grounds of the motherhouse was built to allow sisters and novices to attend college without undue hardship. Today, 58 years later, Our Lady of Angels—now known as Neumann University—has acquired property owned by the sisters to both honor the sisters’ legacy and grow their campus footprint. Read more about this mutual partnership on page 4.
